I – Chairman's Column

Dear Commission Members, Friends and Colleagues:

At present we are all looking forward to the IGU's Regional Conference to be held July 12-16, 2010 in Tel Aviv, Israel. The theme of the conference is Bridging Diversity in a Globalizing World. The Second Circular has just been made public. In the Future Events section of this Newsletter information regarding our commission is published. Other important subjects regarding the Tel Aviv conference can be found at www.igu2010.com. The Commission on Political Geography is represented within the Organizing Committee of the Tel Aviv conference by Prof. David Newman (Ben Gurion University of the Negev, Beer Sheva). Prof. Newman arranged a pre-conference meeting entitled Borders, Territory and Conflict in a Globalizing World to be held July 7-11, 2010 in Beer Sheva. We are pleased that the program includes a Field Trip to the Palestinian Autonomous Territories and to other parts of Israel as well. The Field Trip will depart Beer Sheva in the morning of July 11 and end in Tel Aviv on the same day. We should visit the southern part of the West Bank, Gader Ha'hafrada (Separation Fence), Gush Etzion, as well as sites related to the political geography of Jerusalem.

The Commission on Political Geography (IGU CPG) was well represented at the 2009 Annual Meeting of the Association of American Geographers in Las Vegas, March 22 – 27, 2009. There, the Political Geography Specialty Group has had its 22nd annual pre-conference organized by Prof. Fred Shelley. It should be noted that Julian Minghi and Stan Brunn awards have been granted to young scholars interested in Political geography. In honor to Professor Minghi's teaching a panel of US and European professionals was organized. I had the opportunity to talk to and discuss issues of our commission with two members of the CPG IGU Steering Committee (Dr. Takashi Yamazaki, Dr. Ellena Dell' Agnese) and to exchange ideas with numerous American colleagues. On other occasions, in particular at the 1st Adriatic Forum, I've discussed similar topics with our two Central-European colleagues, Dr. Marek Sobczynski and Alexandru Ilies. I am looking forward to discuss CPG issues with Dr. Stephane Rosiere at the Borderscapes II meeting in Trapani, Sicily, this Fall and with other members of the Steering committee at or before the Tel Aviv Meeting next year. Members of the Steering committee are eager to organize symposiums. Dr. Yamazaki's idea is to organize a meeting on Political Geography of Islands.

Members of the Steering Committee and officer's of the CPG IGU have forwarded their CV's. The editor hopes to add more on activities of members in the future. The editor of Newsletters for the years 2008-2012 published his CV in the previous edition (No.10). We all are interested that through our work our discipline and society will gain new knowledge. Therefore, other professionals, politicians and all interested in political geography should be informed about our publishing, research and teachings of us.

David Newman is Professor at the Department of Politics and Society at the Ben Gurion University of Negev, Beer Sheva, Israel. He was born in London. He holds an Honors B.A. in Geography from Queen Mary College at the University of London (1978) and a PhD in geography from the University of Durham, England (1981). In 1982 he was appointed as lecturer in the Tel Aviv University Department of Geography and immigrated to Israel. In 1987 he became a senior lecturer in the Department of Geography at Ben-Gurion University of the Negev. From 1996 to 1998 he served as Director of its Hubert Humphrey Institute for Social Research. In 1988 he founded the Ben-Gurion University Department of Politics and Government and served as its first chairperson until 2003. That year he facilitated the founding of the BGU Centre for the Study of European Politics and Society (CSEPS), with which he is affiliated. Newman publishes essays and opinion columns in newspapers and magazines, such as the New York Times, the Guardian, and the Jerusalem Post. His political activities have focused on the Israeli peace camp, strongly arguing for territorial withdrawal and the establishment of a Palestinian State alongside Israel. Since 1999 he has been co-editor, together with Professor John Agnew from UCLA, of the international journal Geopolitics, published quarterly by Taylor and Francis (Routledge). The present co-editor is Professor Simon Dalby from Carleton University in Ottawa, Canada.

Newman's published work focuses on two main areas of research: a) territorial dimensions of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. Newman has analysed the impact of the West Bank settlement network and the settler movement Gush Emunim. He has also carried out research on the changing territorial configurations of a Two State solution to the conflict with a particular emphasis on the Green Line boundary which separates Israel from the West Bank. During the early 1990s, Newman undertook joint work with Arab geographer, Ghazi Falah looking at the territorial and border implications of a Two State solution, some of earliest collaborative work between Israeli and Palestinian scholars to have been undertaken in. This resulted in a series of four published articles as well as a retrospective look at the problems of undertaking collaborative research of this nature. b) a conceptual discussion relating to the functions and significances of borders in the contemporary period of globalization. Newman has published a counter narrative to globalization notions of a borderless and deterritorialized world, arguing that borders retain their significance in the contemporary world and that there is no such thing as deterritorialization, only reterritorialization in which spatial configurations of power are constantly being reconfigured. Not only does territory and, by association borders, retain their significance, but Newman emphasizes the need to focus on the symbolic dimensions of territory and the ways in which this feeds into the formation of national identity and attachment to place and space, in addition to the more traditional discussions which focus on the tangible and physical characteristics of territory, such as size, shape and physical resources.

Newman is associated with a number of border and boundary related institutions, such as the International Boundaries Research Unit in the UK, the Association of Borderland Studies in the USA, the Border Regions in Transition (BRIT) network, and as the Secretary of the Commission on the World Political Map (WPM) of the International Geographical Union. He has facilitated and attended as keynote speaker at international gatherings dealing with geopolitical and border related issues. Newman has been involved in peace-related activities. This includes joint Israeli-Palestinian projects looking at territorial and border issues, funded by the Ford Foundation, the John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation (both with Ghazi Falah, the United States Institute of Peace in a project examining potential cross-border cooperation between Israel and a future Palestinian State, a European Union consortium project looking at the role of the EU in intervening in border conflicts, and a European Union Partnership in Peace program, facilitating peace related workshops for religious teachers in Israel and Palestine.

Carl Dahlman joined the Department of Geography at Miami University, Oxford, Ohio, USA in 2006. Previously, he taught at the University of South Carolina from 2001-2006. He received the Ph.D. in Geography from the University of Kentucky in 2001. While there he also earned a certificate in social theory. In college, he double-majored in sociology and music and then completed a masters degree in urban affairs. He grew up near Washington, D.C. While his focus is political geography and forced migration, he engages more broadly with much of human geography, particularly in Southeast Europe. His largest research projects focus on return migrations by those forcibly displaced. One such project is an on-going study of the geopolitics of Kurdish refugee migration. The forced migration of Kurds and others out of northern Iraq contributes to one of the most persistent migration streams to Europe and North America in recent history. The problems for both asylum seeker and host government are exacerbated by the reticence of many Europeans, Americans, and Canadians to sponsor refugees and complicating political and social factors occasionally marked by violence. Dahlman's research seeks to better understand these tensions and their role in international politics. Another project focuses on the international community's belated effort to reverse ethnic cleansing in Bosnia, for which he has been collaborating with Dr. Gerard Toal (Gearóid Ó Tuathail) of Virginia Tech. Their research focuses on the geopolitics surrounding implementation of the Dayton Peace Accord's provision for refugee returns. They've conducted fieldwork there during the first half of this decade. This work was funded by the National Science Foundation. Other areas of research include transnational and diasporic identities, international politics in the Balkans and Middle East, as well as cultural geopolitical identities such as masculinity and nationalism. Dahlman is currently beginning new research projects on the nationalist imagination of genetic origins, non-state spaces, and the cultural geopolitics of air power. Past research investigated the political geographical aspects of campaign finance in the United States, part of which appeared in the January 2001 issue of The Atlantic Monthly.

Sanjay Chaturvedi is currently the coordinator in the Centre for the Study of Geopolitics, Department of Political Science and Honorary Director, Centre for the Study of Mid-West and Central Asia, at Panjab University, Chandigarh, India. His area of specialization is the theory and practice of Geopolitics; with special reference to Polar Regions, Indian Ocean and South Asia. He was awarded the Nehru Centenary British Fellowship, followed by a highly coveted Leverhulme Trust Research Grant, to pursue his post-doctoral research at University of Cambridge, England, from 1992 to 1995. Dr. Chaturvedi has been a recipient of several Visiting Fellowships abroad, including Department of Geography at University of Durham, U.K., Columbia University Institute for Scholars, Reid Hall, and Maison des Sciences de l'Homme, Paris (under International Program of Advanced Studies); Faculty of Law, University of Sydney, Australia; Ben Gurion University of the Negev, Israel, and Henry L. Stimson Centre, Washington D.C., USA. He was also awarded a research grant by the Australia-India Council, in the year 2001, to visit several institutions of higher learning in Australia, in connection with his project, "Australian-Indian Perspectives on Antarctic and Ocean Governance: Interactions, Linkages and Opportunities".

Sanjay Chaturvedi serves on the international editorial board of journals like Geopolitics (Routledge), and Co-operation and Conflict (Sage). He is the Co-Chair of the Research Committee 15 (RC 15) of International Political Science Association (IPSA) for the term 2007-2010. He initiated, along with Dr. Dennis Rumley (University of Western Australia) Indian Ocean Research Group (IORG), at Panjab University in November 2002. A network of more than thirty active researchers, IORG acts as a facilitator and coordinator of research on the nature and impact of the human uses of the Indian Ocean, with the overall objective of realizing peace, co-operation and ecologically sustainable development in the Indian Ocean region. He is also a member of the Core Group of Experts on Antarctica and Southern Ocean set up by the Ministry of Earth Sciences, Government of India. He is the author of The Dawning of Antarctica (1990); Polar Regions: A Political Geography (1996); co-author of Partitions: Reshaping Minds and States (2005); and co-editor of Geopolitical Orientations Regionalism and Security in the Indian Ocean (2004); India in the Antarctic: Scientific and Geopolitical Perspectives (2005); Energy Security and the Indian Ocean Region (2005); Globalization: Spaces, Identities and Insecurities (2005); and Security of the Sea Lanes of Communication in the Indian Ocean Region (2007).

Elena Del'Agnes is Associate Professor of geography and teaches courses on Political Geography and Geography of Development in Milan, Italy. She also coordinates a post-graduate program in Tourism and Development. Her research interests are focused on political geography and gender issues (nation building processes and regional iconographies in Europe and in Asia; European borders and their role as identity markers; cities as symbolic landscapes and political places/spaces; the political geography of masculinity). She has been working on rural and urban deprivation, and she is also interested in urban developments and transformations. Since 2004, Elena dell'Agnes is a member of the Steering Committee of the Commission on Political Geography of IGU (International Geographical Union).

Paul Reuber is since 2001 Professor of Human Geography at the Department of Geography of the University of Muenster, Germany. In 1992 he graduated from the Department of Geography, University of Cologne and worked for 4 years there. In the following two years he was a DAAD (German Academic Exchange Fund) guest lecturer at Khon Kaen University, Northeastern Thailand. As he returned to Germany he took a post of an Associate Professor at the University of Heidelberg. From 1999 onwards he served as Associate Professor at the Department of Geography, University of Mainz. He and Guenther Wolersdorfer are the authors of Germany's first contemporary textbook on political geography entitled Politische Geographie: Handlungsorientierte Ansätze und Critical Geopolitics (2001).

Stephan Rossiere is Professor at the Department of Geography, University of Reims Champagne-Ardenne (URCA) at Reims, France. He serves as the Editor-in-chief of the online journal L'Espace Politique and is member of the CNFG (French Committee of Geography) since 2002. In 2008 he organized a well visited professional meeting in Reims and is in the process of publishing the proceedings /S. Rosière, Kevin Cox, Carl Dahlman, C. Vacchiani-Marcuzzo (eds.)/, Penser l'espace politique (Thinking the Space of Politics). In 2008 he edited Dictionnaire de l'espace politique. Concepts en géographie politique et géopolitique (Dictionary of Political Space) and in 2007 published a major French textbook on political geography Géographie politique et géopolitique. Une grammaire de l'espace politique (Political Geography and Geopolitics. A Grammar of Political Space). Recently he received the Award of the geographical Society of Paris - Prix Charles Maunoir.

Marek Sobczyński is Professor at the Faculty of Geographical Sciences, University of Lodz, Poland. He studied at the University of Gdańsk in Gdynia, at the Jagiellonian University in Cracow and at the University of Lodz. His main research interests are political geography, geography of urban settlement, social-economical geography, historical geography, electoral geography, geography of war, political history, international relations. His regional focus encompasses Central Poland, the city of Lodz, Central-Eastern Europe and the Third World. At present he serves as Director of the Institute of Social-Economical Geography and Spatial Organizations at University of Lodz and as Head of the Chair of Political Geography and Regional Studies, Faculty of Geographical Sciences there. He is Vice-President of the Polish Geographical Society and the Head of the Centre of Asian Studies in Lodz. In 2007 he received the President of University of Lodz Award in recognition of editing book "Państwa i terytoria zależne. Ujęcie geograficzno-polityczne" and other publications in political geography. As editor (and K. Heffner) he received wide recognition for the book The Role of Ethnic Minorities in Border Regions: Selected Problems of Ethnic and Religious Minorities (2003).

II – FUTURE EVENTS

IGU Regional Conference, ISRAEL, JULY 7-16, 2010:

The International Geographical Union (IGU) will be holding its Regional Conference in Tel Aviv, Israel, on July 12-16 July 2010. The IGU Commission on Political Geography IGU CPG will be organizing three sessions at the major conference (and two jointly organized with the MRP – Mediterranean Renaissance Program), and a pre-conference workshop which will take place at Ben-Gurion University of the Negev, immediately prior to the main event, from 7-11 July, 2010. Interested participants are invited to submit papers for either (and both) of the meetings:

A. IGU Regional Meeting (main event): Tel Aviv 12-16 July 2010:

BRIDGING DIVERSITY IN A GLOBALIZED WORLD: THE CHANGING GEOPOLITICAL STRUCTURES OF THE MEDITERRANEAN AND THE MIDDLE EAST

The north-south/south-north and east-west/west-east relations within the Mediterranean Basin have never been as intensive as at the dawn of the 21st century. The Mediterranean is no longer the sole interest of the Mediterranean Rim countries in Euro-Asia and Africa, or even of the named continents; it has become transformed into a global "playground of interests". Over the past decade, we have witnessed dual globalization narratives, a trend toward more homogeneous global conditions (as the result of the widespread competition) and, at one and the same time, a parallel trend in which differences are enhanced as localities – often set free through globalization itself - strive to maintain their unique identities. Globalization in the Mediterranean represents a complex set of processes, which political geographers have only just begun to understand.

In the POLITICAL GEOGRAPHY SESSIONS of the IGU Regional Meeting in Tel Aviv (July 12 - 16, 2010) we wish to explore the following topics:

- The Changing Geopolitical Structures of the Mediterranean and the Middle East
- Borders in the Mediterranean (organized jointly by the IGU Mediterranean Renaissance Program and the IGU Commission on Political Geography);
- Globalization, Glocalization and Territorial Identity in the Mediterranean Rim;
- The Geopolitics of Counter-Globalization Narratives
- "Engineering the Mediterranean" - Transnational Projects and their Spatial Impacts;
- Global Warming and Geopolitical Implications Related to the Mediterranean Basin (organized jointly by the IGU Mediterranean Renaissance Program and the IGU Commission on Political Geography);

Papers for the IGU Regional Conference should be submitted via email to geography@targetconf.com. Please indicate that your abstract is for the presentation during the session of the Commission on Political Geography

B. PRE-CONFERENCE WORKSHOP – Ben-Gurion University of the Negev; Beer Sheva (July 7-11, 2010): BORDERS, TERRITORY AND CONFLICT IN A GLOBALISING WORLD

The workshop will focus on the changing relationships between Borders, Territory and Conflict in a Globalised World. Sessions will negotiate the two contrasting narratives of a borderless world on the one hand, and the notions of territorial securitization which have re-emerged in the post 9/11 world, on the other hand. Although some local issues will be discussed, we wish to focus on the conceptualization of the linkages between borders, territory and conflict at a variety of spatial scales. Participants are invited to submit papers on any of the following themes:

- Borders in a Borderless World
- Territory in a Deterritorialized World
- Borders, Territory and Conflict Under Conditions of Globalization
- Borders, Territory and Conflict in the Mediterranean Region
- Borders, Territory and Conflict in the Contemporary Middle East
- Geopolitical Change Under Conditions of Globalization
- The Politics of Cartography and Geopolitical Representations

The pre-conference workshop will include a field trip, to be co-organized with the Commission on Indigenous Groups whose pre-conference workshop will also be taking place at Ben-Gurion University – local organizer Professor Oren Yiftachel.

Original papers in the field of Political Geography and Geopolitics will be considered for publication in Geopolitics. Further details concerning accommodation and costs etc., will be sent out at a later date. Every effort will be made to keep the costs of the pre-conference workshop to a minimum (to cover hotel and food expenses).

Registration and payment for the main IGU must be carried out separately on the official IGU forms.

Submission of abstracts and intent to participate should be sent on the enclosed registration form, no later than 10th September 2009, to:

- Prof Anton Gosar – Chair of the Commission: anton.gosar@guest.arnes.si
- Prof David Newman – Secretary of the Commission and local organizer: newman@bgu.ac.il

Please note: All communications will only be carried out through email unless hard copy is specifically requested. We point out your attention also to our IGU Commission on Political Geography Website (<http://www.cas.muohio.edu/igu-cpg>).

BORDERSCAPES II: ANOTHER BRICK IN THE WALL?

Trapani, September 13-16, 2009

The second meeting devoted to borderscapes will in particular deal with sea boundaries and their physical and symbolic landscape. For this reason, it will be held in Sicily, in the town of Trapani, along the Southern frontier of the European Union.

"Boundaries represent the line of physical contact between states and afford opportunities for co-operation and discord" (Prescott, 1976). Working as lines which contour a juridical space, they represent a limit to State action, and to its ability to organize within its own territory. In this way, they produce separate spheres of authority and planning, shaping, as a consequence, different landscapes on different sides.

"How these boundaries are used and perceived may in turn have additional impact on the landscape" (Rumley and Minghi, 1991). Indeed, they are not only lines of difference between separate landscapes but also landscapes of difference in and of themselves, zones variously demarcating separation or interaction between trans-border realities and spaces. Along these lines, they not only represent the limits of political structures but are also a marker for cultural identities, a symbolic place where the construction/recognition of the Self is made possible by the encounter/separation with the Other.

In these globalized times it is easier for goods to move than for human beings. What happens in these places is, barely or clearly, an intersection where, as in a labyrinth, the road is described by both experiences. Thus, borderscapes are constructed by two different interacting groups. The pseudo-homogeneities of nations find their weak spots in the limits, where we can easily recognize weird spaces: spaces of exception. In these, the sovereignty is outlaw, the norm is suspended and individuals are just bodies.

Topics to be discussed:

A. Borderscapes of fluxes and communication (Trans-border institutions and Trans-border regions; Governance and policy of borders);

B. Sea borderscapes (Borderscapes of migration and hybridity; Fluxes, gravitation areas, commercial spaces);

C. Borderscapes as spaces of cultural encounters (Identities and sociolinguistic boundaries, education; Minorities, territorial disputes, cosmopolitan cities)

D. Borderscapes as symbolic landscapes (Demarcating objects and symbols; Cinematic borders and borderscapes in popular culture);

E. Gendered borderscapes

Invited Keynote speakers are: Gabriele del Grande, Vladimir Kolossov, Julian Minghi, Janet Momsen, Jan Monk, Stephan Rosière. The scientific committee: Chiara Brambilla, Università degli Studi di Bergamo; Elena Dell'Agnese, University of Milano-Bicocca; Giulia de Spuches, University of Palermo; Vincenzo Guarrasi, University of Palermo; Vincenzo Matera, University of Milano-Bicocca; Marcella Schimdt di Friedberg, University of Milano-Bicocca; Enrico Squarcina, University of Milano-Bicocca

2nd “ADRIATIC FORUM”: CONSTRUCTION AND DECONSTRUCTION OF NATIONALISM AND REGIONALISM: A LONG JOURNEY TO EUROPE

Trieste, October 1-2, 2009

The 2nd Conference of the “Adriatic Forum” is the follow-up of the First Conference of Geographers of the Upper Adriatic – Joint Management of a Borderless Area, held in Koper/Capodistria on 27-28 November 2008 and organized by the Science and Research Centre of Koper and the Faculty of Humanities of the University of Primorska. Using the new name of “Adriatic Forum”, the Conference aims at enlarging the participation to geographers and experts from a wider area. The topic of this 2nd Conference is a classic of Political Geography, confirming its particular relevance in the present era of globalization, characterized by the shift from new European nations towards new regional trends. The moral responsibility of political geographers in the delicate subject of construction and deconstruction of nationalism and regionalism appears to be particularly pregnant, as their contribution has to face quite frequently the temptations of political exploitation which can potentially lead to conflict and instability. The Adriatic area and its hinterland can be considered as an authentic “geopolitical laboratory” where openness and closure are confronting each other, while new trends from local microcosm towards emerging territorial entities are being defined. The historical heritage and the resulting conflicts on a generation and/or territorial basis are often factors of narrowness, in opposition to the contemporary world’s new flows and openness. The aim of the “Adriatic Forum” is to look for and mark out these new routes.

The Conference’s main topics will be: Geography of identities; Geopolitics of nationalism; Nationalism and conflicts; Border areas; Role of regions; Regional and cross-border cooperation; Regional economic integration; Globalization and sovereignty; Minorities; Migrations; International support for peace; EU interventions. All those who are interested in Political Geography, Geopolitics, Geostrategy and Geo-economics are invited to attend the Conference. On the second day, 2nd October, a specific session of the Conference will be reserved for young scholars, PhD seniors and PhD candidates. Organization is within the hands of Prof. Maria Paola Pagnini, Department of Political Science of the University of Trieste (prof. Maria Paola Pagnini). The program of the conference is co-sponsored by the Università telematica delle Scienze Umane Niccolò Cusano (Rome), by the Associazione Italiana Cartografia and by the Società Geografica Italiana. Organizing Committee: Maria Paola Pagnini, Maurizio Scaini, Pierluigi Campregher, Ivan Matejak, Andrea Burro, Giangiacomo Vale. Scientific Committee: Prof. Milan Bufon (Koper-Capodistria), Prof. Anton Gosar (Koper-Capodistria), Prof. Michel Korinman (Paris), Maria Paola Pagnini (Trieste); André-Louis Sanguin (Paris); Gabriele Zanetto (Venice). The abstract (max 400 words) must be sent by 1st September 2009 at the latest. Both registration form and abstract must be sent by e-mail at the following address: adriaticforum@gmail.com. After the above-mentioned deadlines, the participants will receive a second notification, including detailed instructions and information about the conference, the programme and other relevant items.

BORDERS AND IDENTITIES CONFERENCE 2010 (BIC 2010), NEWCASTLE, UNITED KINGDOM, January 8-9, 2010

Meeting Description: While research on borderlands is well-established in the social sciences, it is only within recent years that interest in such regions as sites of particular relevance has taken hold within the fields of sociolinguistics and the sociology of language. Findings from studies on the relationships between and interdependence of language, borders and identities are of great value for many other disciplines within the social sciences - anthropology, human geography, and political science, among others. In the same way, the insights from social scientific research in border areas provide sociolinguists with challenging new theoretical frameworks within which to situate empirical evidence revealing the exact nature of the role language plays in identity-making and -marking in sites where identity is fluid, complex and emergent in social interaction. The Borders and Identities Conference (BIC2010) has two aims: 1) to demonstrate our current state of knowledge in this fast-developing area of sociolinguistic inquiry, and 2) to provide an interdisciplinary perspective in order that the results of recent sociolinguistic studies on the topic can be contextualized in broader social scientific discourse. Our principal objective in organizing the meeting is to foster new collaborative research initiatives by bringing together scholars in allied disciplines, with a view to extending and refining our understanding of the language-identity nexus in regions where in-group and out-group categorizations may be problematic, or at least more salient than elsewhere.

Keynote Addresses: 1. Dave Britain (Essex) 'Where North meets South?: Contact, Divergence, and the Routinisation of the Fenland Dialect Boundary'; 2. Nik Coupland (Cardiff) 'Where does Welsh Begin and End? Ideological'; 3. Boundary Disputes in the Revitalisation of a Minority Language'; 4. Danny Dorling (Sheffield) 'If lions could talk: attempts at mapping over the borders'. The BIC2010 organizing committee welcomes abstracts for oral and poster presentations on the theme of identity construction in borderland areas. Papers need not have a principally linguistic focus. Abstracts should not exceed 400 words in length, including references. Please submit anonymised abstract(s)- in .rtf and PDF format - by e-mail to bic2010@events.york.ac.uk no later than 1st July 2009. Include your name and affiliation, and those of any co-authors, in the accompanying e-mail. Please also state whether you wish your paper to be considered for an oral presentation or a poster if you have any preference.

III – Past Events

105th Annual Meeting Association of American Geographers, Las Vegas, March 21-27, 2009

Professor Fred Shelley, who has organized the pre-conference and sessions at the 105th Annual Meeting of the AAG, has sent us the following report.

The Political Geography Specialty Group (PGSG) of the Association of American Geographers (AAG) was highly active in organizing numerous paper sessions, panel discussions, and other activities at the 105th annual meeting of the AAG in Las Vegas, Nevada in March 2009. A total of 65 sessions were sponsored or co-sponsored by PGSG, which for nearly three decades has been one of the most active and productive specialty groups in the Association. PGSG's annual plenary session is co-sponsored by Elsevier Science, which published the journal Political Geography. This year's plenary session was entitled "The United States in World Affairs after Bush - Geopolitical and Geoeconomic Perspectives from Abroad," and focused on transitions between the outgoing George W. Bush and incoming Barack Obama administrations. Speakers included Chris Gibson of the University of Wollongong, Australia; Takashi Yamazaki of Osaka City University, Japan; Virginie Mamadouh of the University of Amsterdam, the Netherlands; and Maano Ramutsindela of the University of Cape Town, South Africa.

Other PGSG-sponsored sessions focused on political-geographic issues affecting many parts of the world. They included six sessions on Practices and Landscapes of Militarization, organized by Richelle Bernazzoli of the University of Illinois at Urbana, Champaign and Elizabeth Lee of the University of British Columbia; two sessions on "Whither Central and Eastern Europe: Contemporary Dynamics in an Elusive Region," organized by Corey Johnson of the University of North Carolina—Greensboro and Francis Harvey of the University of Minnesota; and two sessions on Geography of War and Reconstruction, organized by Scott Kirsch of the University of North Carolina and Colin Flint of the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. A complete list of PGSG-sponsored sessions including abstracts of presented papers can be accessed through the AAG's website at http://communicate.aag.org/series/aag_org/program/SearchAction.cfm. Each year, PGSG sponsors a preconference in order to provide presenters with more time for discussion of their ideas. The 22nd annual PGSG Preconference was held at the Plaza Hotel in downtown Las Vegas immediately prior to the AAG meeting. The Preconference included 26 presentations on a wide variety of topics including conceptions of geopolitics, international migration and political geography, geography and the natural environment, political geography and popular culture, and geographic aspects of the 2008 U.S. Presidential election. Presenters included scholars from Canada, Germany, Italy, Japan, Slovenia, the United Kingdom, and the United States. Interested persons can obtain an electronic copy of the program including the abstracts from Fred Shelley by e-mail at fshelley@ou.edu.

In honor of Julian Minghi a session entitled Teaching Political Geography was organized at the 105th Annual Meeting of the AAG. The panelist Julian V. Minghi, Kevin R. Cox, Colin Flint, Guntram Herb, Pauliina Raento and Fiona M. Davidson tried to answer the following questions: How is the teaching of political geography doing these days? What was it like before the limelight? What are the teachers of political geography doing well and what could they do better? What kind of foci should classes and textbooks have and how should they respond to change? What about the politics of pedagogy? The panel offered opinionated insights into the wonders of teaching political geography and honors Julian Minghi as a pioneer in this field. The panel proceeded from Professor Minghi's opening comments to brief statements from the other panelists. The audience joined the discussion. The participants have had experience from several pedagogical environments in North America and Europe, have broad international experience, and cover a broad range of research interests in political geography. The organizer of the panel was Prof. Pauliina Raento from the University of Helsinki.

Professor Paul Reuber submits herewith information concerning the activities of the German Commission on Political Geography (Arbeitskreis Politische Geographie), which he is chairing:

In May 2009 a workshop entitled "Refugee Camps as Spaces of Exception" was organized at the University of Muenster. The following papers were presented and discussed: I Close my Eyes and Treat People" - When Humanitarian Aid Does More Harm than Hood: MSF's Experiences in Rwanda and Zaire (Ulrike von Pilar); When Exception Approaches Normality: the Refugee camp as an Entitlement Arena (Bram Jansen); Camping the Border: The Exceptional Politics of Internal Displacement in Acholiland, Northern Uganda (Simon Addison); There is Life in Camps: Observations from Refugee Camps in Zambia (Katharina Inhetveen).

The Annual Conference of the "Arbeitskreis Politische Geographie" within the German Geographical Society (DGfG) took also place in May. The title "Spaces in State of Emergency?: The Contemporary Discussion on Political and Spatial in Theory and Praxis" received extraordinary attention. Paul Reuber and Iris Dzudzek introduced the topic of 7 panels and workshops (where the following professionals participated): Spaces of Exception (Leila Mousa & Diana Griesinger, Georg Glasze & Mélina Germes); Securitization (Benedikt Korf & Jürgen Ossenbrügge; Conrad Schetter; Henriette Neef, Marc Redepenning & Edvania Torres Aguiar Gomes; Johannes Herbeck & Michael Flitner); Space, Legislature and the State (Bernd Belina; Martin Klamt; Joscha Wullweber); "Europeization" of Spaces (Martin Geiger & Andreas Pott; Tobias Chilla; Sebastian Schipper); Daily Routine at EU-Borders (Mihaela Narcisa Arambasa; Kristine Müller; Andrea Kretschmann); Geopolitical Representation und Discourse (Paul Reuber; Shadia Husseini; Lars Stöwesand); Language and Event Spaces (Jörg Mose; Swen Zehetmair; Matthias Lahr; Jörg Mose).

In June 2009 a Panel on "Space, Power and Discourse - Analysing Geopolitical Representations from a Poststructuralist Perspective" at the "4th International Conference in Interpretive Policy Analysis: Discourse and Power in Critical Policy Studies" in Kassel took place. Contents: Hegemony and Difference in the Geo-Politics of Culture - The Way UNESCO articulates Cultural Identities (Iris Dzudzek); The Discursive Constitution of a Geopolitical Region: The Case of Francophonía, Georg Glasze); The Geopolitical Other in the Context of "the War on Terrorism" - The perspective of transnational Arab print media (Shadia Husseini).
